BODY IN SEA, WOUND IN HEART

By International News Service.

NEW YORK, June 19.—With the launching of the superdreadnought Arizona at the Brooklyn Navy Yard at 1 o'clock this afternoon, the United States Navy received the most important addition in its history. Without her armaments, the bare hull of the giant battleships displaces 16,000 tons. When completed she will cost $16,000,000.

The weather for the launching was cool and foggy. Secretary of the Navy Daniels, Secretary of Labor Wilson, United States Senator OGorman, Mayor Mitchel and many other notables were at the navy yard.

Governor W. P. Hunt brought from Arizona a jug of the first water that ever flowed over the lip of Roosevelt dam, which was mixed with champagne for the christening by Miss Esther Ross of Preston, Arizona.

Secretary Daniels asserted the Arizona was the fourth ship to be constructed at the Brooklyn yard, and declared every navy yard should be able to build the country's naval craft.

"The backbone of the navy is still the power of the dreadnought that can keep the seas in any weather and with which its great armament of powerful guns and secondary batteries, and with protection against the submarine torpedo, can concentrate its power," said Secretary Daniels.

The body of a well-dressed man was found floating at dawn today off Marblehead with a bullet wound in the heart. The police are trying to identify the victim and to clear the mystery surrounding his death.

Undertaker George N. Nichols who found the bullet wound thinks it a case of suicide, but the police wish to investigate all phases in order to be sure that the man was not shot and thrown overboard. The foul play theory, however, is not seriously entertained by the Marblehead officials.

The man wore no coat or vest. He is apparently fifty years of age, five feet, seven inches in height and weighed 160 pounds. He had thick black hair, a reddish mustache and beard, and upper front teeth nearly all gold. He was clothed in light underwear, black lace shoes, black socks, black trousers, white shirt with stiff bosom.

There was nothing on his person to identify him. What became of his coat and vest is a mystery. Whatever valuables he may have had, such as watch or wallet, would be in them it is thought. The man's clothing and appearance show him to be fairly prosperous. Samuel Stone, a lobsterman, found the body, which may have come from a passing steamer.

STEAMSHIP RAMMED U-29

BERLIN, June 19.—What is regarded here as a particularly significant statement in its bearing on the forthcoming reply of the German government to President Wilson's second note was made today by the German Admiralty.

In an official announcement of the loss of the submarine U-29—one of the most famous of Germany's underwater craft and which had a long record of daring feats—the Admiralty declared the U-29 was sunk by being "rammed by a British tank steamer that was flying the Spanish flag."

It is believed here this statement, or a more or less definite reference to it, will be incorporated in the German note to the United States as evidence of the impossibility of halting and searching British steamers in the war zone.

Germany has repeatedly charged that British merchant steamers were in effect vessels of war owing to a standing reward in England to the captain of any English liner who should ram and sink a German submarine.

It is pointed out here that one English sea captain, who sank a German submarine while the latter was lying to, awaiting compliance with its order to abandon the steamer within five minutes, was highly honored by the English Admiralty.

In addition to being given a money award, he was made a lieutenant in the English Naval Reserves.

It is expected that today's statement foreshadows a vigorous repetition of Germany's charges that British steamers, under the orders of the English Admiralty, resort to flying the flags of neutral nations while passing through the submarine zone.

Today's statement is taken here to add great weight to the German assertion that she is force dinto the method of submarine warfare she had adopted as a result of England's own naval policy.

It is announced that the British steamship Dulcie, 2,000 tons, was sunk off Suffolk today by a German submarine. One life was lost.

VIENNA, June 18.—A Berlin dispatch to the Neue Freie Presse says James W. Gerard, United States ambassador to Germany, has requested all Americans in Germany to register at the consulates.

WIFE WILL PLEAD FOR BECKER

NEW YORK, June 19 — Mrs. Charles Becker, whose husband was denied a re-argument of his case by the State Court of Appeals yesterday, declared today she would make a personal appeal to Governor Whitman. Only the intervention of the Governor can save the convicted slayer of Herman Rosenthal from the electric chair.

"We shall keep on fighting," declared Mrs. Becker, her eyes red and swollen from a night of constant weeping, "I am absolutely confident that Charles is innocent. The new blow has not diminished my faith in my husband. Charlie will never die at Sing Sing if I can prevent it. I am going to make a personal appeal to Governor Whitman."

Martin T. M'Manus, chief counsel for Becker, went to Sing Sing to confer with his client.

Germans Back of British Lines

By International News Service.

BOULOGNE, June 19.—A party of Germans with two armored automobiles have been found behind the British lines. The shelling of a British hospital which moved several times without escaping the bombardment, and shells falling in the British trenches from behind, led to the discovery of eight Germans in two autos, each armed with aero guns, ensconced in a cave with fifteen months' stores and provisions.

Pope's Nephews Are at Front

ROME, June 19.—The Giornale D'Italia says the Pope has two nephews at the front, one a captain and the other a lieutenant of cavalry. Both are the sons of Count Persico of Venice, the Pope's brother and a rear admiral in the reserve.

QUOTES KAISER FOR EARLY PEACE

PARIS, June 19.—Extracts from a letter said to have been written by Emperor William to a personage of the Bavarian court were published by the Matin today as follows:

Our only object is a peace profitable to the German states. This peace may be concluded sooner than we thought. It could be signed tomorrow if I wished. The empire always is susceptible of growth. What cannot be achieved today will be achieved later.

Carnegie Takes Yachting Trip; Health Frail

State Street heard today that Andrew Carnegie, who has been in seclusion for a week at Bar Harbor, is seriously ill.

For the past 48 hours Steel and a number of other stocks were unsteady, while market leaders here and in New York have sought definite information as to the prospect of the steel master's return to complete health.

New York reports today said that Carnegie was able to take a short yachting trip yesterday. His condition is understood to be due to an attack of grip in the Spring, from which he failed to fully rally.

Dr. Jasper J. Garmany of New York, the Carnegie physician, is at Bar Harbor for the Summer.

The AMERICAN wired its correspondent in Bar Harbor today for a report on the exact condition of Carnegie's health. He wired:

Carnegie in usual health, which is not good. By order of private physician, he denies himself to all. General expression here is that his health requires constant oversight and complete rest.

Boy of 8 Stabs Playmate After Fight With Fists

Carlo Vinciguerre, eight, of No. 219 Maverick street, East Boston, plunged a knife into the side of James Sweeney, eight, of No. 131 Havre street, while both youngsters were playing on Cottage street playgrounds.

The boys had first a fist fight, but when the Italian lad saw the other boy getting the best of him, he drew the dirk.

Sweeney was taken to the East Boston Relief Station and his wounds were dressed. Vinciguerre escaped for a short time by seeking shelter on his father's bakery wagon, but was finally caught and will be held to wait the recovery of Sweeney.

"Smiling Jim" Now Acting as Mayor

"Smiling Jim" Donovan took up the duties of acting-Mayor of Boston at noon today, entering the "throne room" through the regular Mayor's gate for the first time since former Mayor Collins held the position ten years ago.

Former Lieutenant-Governor Barry was the first to extend his congratulations. He presented the new acting-Mayor with a beautiful gold fob. "Pure white, in both instances," asserted Mr. Barry, in an informal presentation address.

As City Clerk Mr. Donovan becomes acting Mayor, ex officio, while Mayor Curley and President Coleman of the City Council are out of the city. With Mayor Curley on the way to San Francisco and President Coleman in Chicago, it is thought that he will be compelled to serve for at least two weeks, when Coleman is expected back from his western trip.

HOLD BACK DECISION TILL EVE OF DEATH

ATLANTA, Ga., June 19.—Bets of 2 to 1 that Leo M. Frank would receive a commutation of sentence from death to life imprisonment are freely made on the streets of Atlanta and around the City Hall. It seems to be the unanimous opinion that the governor will grant clemency.

ATLANTA, June 19—Leo M. Frank will be granted no reprieve. He will either go to the gallows on June 22 for the murder of Mary Phagan or he will begin on Monday a sentence of life imprisonment.

Governor John M. Slaton today announced that he would not hand down a decision upon the appeal of Frank for executive clemency before Monday afternoon and that he might not render his decision until Tuesday, the day Frank is under sentence to die.

Governor Slaton made this early announcement to refute a report that was circulated throughout the entire State that Frank's sentence had been commuted late last night.

The rumor created intense excitement in Atlanta and other cities and downtown streets here were crowded until early today by multitudes awaiting the morning editions of the newspaper in read of the Governor's decision.

When the Governor said he would not announce the decision before Monday afternoon or Tuesday morning he was asked if he would not grant Frank a reprieve because of the nearness of the time set for the execution.

"No," replied the Governor. "The judgment of the court should have caused the prisoner to prepare for death. In the event that my decision to alter the sentence has had ample time to make preparation."

'COMRADE' LYING IN ISLAND GRAVE

Edmund Trowbridge Dana, grandson of the poet, Longfellow, told today his own story of the pitiable tragedy of Jessie Holliday Dana, his young English wife, his "Little Comrade," the "perfect bride" of his ethical marriage, who went out calmly and alone and alone and drowned herself—as Dana inferred—in the Nantucket surf in a melancholy conviction that life held no more joy for her.

Young Dana arrive din Boston at 12.45 this afternoon from Nantucket, where his "Little Comrade" lies in a lonely grave. He was joined at Woods Hole by his brother, Allston Dana of White Plains, who commuted with him to Boston. Edmund Trowbridge Dana said:

My wife and I had never been at Nantucket together before. I was there about ten years ago for (two or three weeks.

She had been down to the bathing beach only before while we were there this time. Thursday was her second trip to the beach, her last one.

She had been in a sanitarium before we went to Nantucket. She had a bad attack of melancholia last Wednesday night. She arose Thursday morning while I was asleep. The absence of her bathing suit told me where she had gone.

I am preparing a statement to be given to the newspapers. Then there will be no opportunity for any mistakes. This statement will deal with the circumstances that led to my wife becoming melancholy, and finally to her death.

Allston Dana, the brother, remarked:

There is no doubt that she committed suicide.

"What will all be covered in my statement?" said Edmund Trowbridge Dana.

The greatest husband was self-possessed. He wore a mixed suit, a raincoat, wide-brimmed straw hat and gray sweater, with the Harvard "H" on the front. The athletic emblem was earned by track team excellence in college.

From Nantucket Dana brought simply a suit case. He traveled by the steamer Gay Head across to Woods Hole, where his brother was waiting for him.

The Boston train was at the Woods Hole station, so Dana lost no time in getting into the rear seat of the next to the last car. He thought apparently all the Boston newspapers he could get, took out a lemon from one pocket and began to suck it, scanning the papers meanwhile.

DISCUSSES MARRIAGE.

He seemed concerned in some mistakes which he said he found in the newspapers regarding the famous "ethical" marriage ceremony of the Danas three years ago also in sundry facts regarding his wife's father.

He said that his father-in-law was not a coal baron in England, but a steel operator.

"Before the war," he said, "my father-in-law did was to play golf. Now I believe he is in one of the Sheffield plants."

Richard H. Dana, father of Edmund, said today that he was going to take his next flight out to the Dana Summer home at Manchester. The elder Mr. Dana refuses to believe that his daughter-in-law took her own life. He declared that Medical Examiner Grouard of Nantucket must explain how he came to his "absurd" conclusion. At his Seattle street home in Cambridge, before his son arrived, Mr. Dana said:

DOUBTS SUICIDE.

"That doctor must explain to me why he came to the conclusion that Jessie was a suicide. I don't believe it. Just the mere fact that she might have been suffering from melancholy doesn't convince me that she would intentionally do away with herself.

"Jessie has never been a well girl since she took that fast of forty days. I am informed by a medical expert that such an act would seriously affect the muscles of the heart. He doubted if this was the cause of her death. True, she had been a little despondent. Ever since little Shaw was born she has been under more or less of a strain.

"They had everything to be happy for. Edmund has a fine position as an instructor in architecture at university. He is situated far more comfortably than the ordinary young college professor. Of course I help some. Little Shaw is now with Edmund's brother and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Allston Dana, of White Plains, New York.

HOME FOR BABY.

"They have three children, and it makes a perfect home for Edmund's baby. Edmund will go with us today to our Manchester Summer home. I do not care to elucidate my theory. It was as my boy wished it. Why comment upon it?"

Jessie Holliday Dana—Little Comrade.

Such is the strange epitaph, scribbled by her husband on a rough stone, that marks the grave in Newton Cemetery, Nantucket, of the little English portrait painter whose short life, she made it prove, was a conversion, even to the manner in choosing its end.

"To leave your newly wed husband or wife unwillingly, however wisely you may have planned and however judicious," she had said some after her strange marriage ceremony, "is to leave him or her because you really want to and ought to in the abyss of immorality—according to the gossip of convention."

DRAMATIC LIFE ENDS.

Her intimate friends, who have admired her while they wondered at her unconventional ideas, find in this a possible explanation for the dramatic ending of her short three years of married life. She had been married exactly three years and two days.

Strange as was her marriage, by ceremony of her own composition, strange as was her married life, commencing with a terribly fast and several months separation from her bridegroom; strange as were the plans she had announced for the uprising of her little son, Shaw Holliday, strange as was the manner in which she cut it all short and in which she had planned to be buried.

From the reports furnished the medical examiner, Dr. John F. Grouard, of Nantucket, she left her husband early in the morning, Thursday. She failed to return. There was no search, no alarm given.

BURIED IN PLAIN BOX.

It was soon a body found in the harbor, floating near the jetty. "Jessie Dana," embroidered on a stocking, sent the finder to the grewsome find hurrying to the Dana Cottage. The husband accompanied the man to the place where the body was, and identified it as that of his wife to whom he had promised in her own marriage ritual, "to serve that you may never regret your choice."

After the legal formalities attending all sudden deaths had been fulfilled, the husband carried out what must have been her last wishes as regard to the disposal of her remains.

Just as she had shorn her marriage ceremony of all conventional formalities, so she had shorn the funeral ceremonies. In a plain box, followed by none except her husband, the undertakers and a few curious natives of Nantucket, she was simply buried.

Dana had assisted in lifting that box into the wagon—not a hearse, she would have objected to that surrender to convention—and rode with it to the little Newton cemetery. He helped carry it from the wagon to the grave, which the undertakers assistants were digging.

When it had been lowered, and the last spadeful of earth shoveled over it, Dana walked afield, gathering a huge armful of wild flowers, mostly buttercups. He returned to strew them over the fresh earth, and then placed on the grave a potted geranium, bearing a single red blossom.

At the head of the grave he placed a broken piece of slate on which he inscribed

J. H. D., '84-'15.
JESSIE HOLLIDAY DANA
LITTLE COMRADE.

At the foot of the flower strewn mound he placed a rough field stone. "So she had wished it," he answered all arguments of the undertakers who protested so fervently as they dared against so unconventional a burial.

"FREEDOM TO DIE."

"Freedom to think—freedom to live," had been the often-proclaimed faith of the little Socialist. "Freedom to die" must have been understood in her strange code, if her suicide and her strange burial, evidently prearranged by her, carries any weight. She had often said she loved the ocean—that she was happiest near it. And those who knew her best believe she made but one miscalculation in ending it all. They think she would have wished to remain in the sea.

Those friends advance this conviction even in explanation of the burial. Failing a land resting place in the ocean, they think she would have preferred to be interred in sight and England to Name D. A. Thomas as Agent in U. S.

LONDON, June 19.—The important position of purchasing agent for the Allies in America has been offered to D. A. Thomas, multimillionaire coal magnate, who will probably accept.

Mr. Thomas is expected to deal directly with the makers of arms and ammunition in Canada and the United States, eliminating the middleman and thus saving money and time. His headquarters will be in Ottawa and New York.

The sending of a government agent to America is expected to result in the severance of relations between the British government and the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., so far as the purchasing of war supplies is concerned.

Mr. Thomas, with his daughter, Lady Mackworth, was on the Lusitania, and both were saved.

The projected trip of the former Secretary of State and Mrs. Bryan to their Winter home at Miami, Fla., has been abandoned temporarily. Mr. and Mrs. Bryan will return to Washington in the evening and tomorrow will go to Asheville, N. C., for a short stay.

Carpenters Near Strike in Chicago

CHICAGO, June 19.—Hopes of a peaceful and early settlement of the strike of 16,000 union carpenters, which is keeping 150,000 building trades workmen idle in Chicago, had almost completely vanished today, after Major Thompson had forced a settlement on the street car and elevated railway strike and appeared to be in a fair way to settle the building trades dispute. The union carpenters renewed their demands for one dollar an hour, 8 cents an hour, and the contractors replied with the announcement that they would import non-union carpenters and put them to work Monday unless an agreement to arbitrate is reached tonight.

AUSTRIA SHELLS ITALIAN COAST

By BRIXTON D'ALLAIRE,
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

ROME, June 18.—Naval activity in the Adriatic has been renewed and both the Austrian and Italian coasts have been bombarded, it is officially announced by the Admiralty.

An Italian dirigible bombarded the Austrian ammunition factory at Trieste. The Austrians have sunk the steamship Maria Grazia. Italian aeroplanes have been active. The text of the official statement follows:

"Yesterday and today the enemy attempted further operations against our coast. Our destroyers attacked an enemy squadron operating near Lagunbianca and hit that. The destroyers were not damaged.

"At the same time we bombarded Tamarik and Salvores lighship. This morning an Austrian cruiser bombarded Monopoli. One of our dirigibles bombarded an ammunition factory at Trieste.

"The Austrians sank the steamer Maria Grazia in the Adriatic, but the crew was saved.

"Salvores is fifteen miles from Trieste.

"Our attacks on the Tyrol, Trent and Cadore fronts on the 17th proceeded successfully. Night attacks of the enemy with long range artillery designed to harass our advance, were unsuccessful. We also repulsed minor attacks by small parties of Austrian troops.

"The work of destroying the fortresses of Malborghetto on the Carnia front with our big guns is proceeding methodically. On the afternoon of the 17th, the enemy's artillery attempted to reply, but his guns were soon silenced by our fire.

"Further reports from the Monte Nero zone of operations increase the laurels of our troops. As soon as military conditions will allow it, the details will be given and these will show that our troops deserve the highest honors for their bravery in the fighting there.

AIR RAIDS.

"On the Isonzo River front the action which began near Plava is developing into an engagement of large and important proportions.

"A floating battery belonging to the Italian navy very effectually bombarded the enemy's artillery position near Duino.

"On the night of June 17, an aeroplane attached to the air branch of the navy service destroyed the railway station at Divaco. Divaco is thirty miles east of Trieste, on the railway line between Trieste and Fiume.

"On the same night, our dirigibles made an excursion over the enemy's territory and bombarded with apparent efficacy the trenches and position of the Austrians at Monte Santo, seven miles north of Gradisca. Extensive damage was done to the station at Volejafrasa on the railway line between Gorizia and Dorberg. Our air craft returned safely to the base."

Men's Hosiery on Street Floor

Women's Hosiery on Specially Arranged Counters—Second Floor

This is the old story that you have heard once every six months for several years—this year with an interesting change—but it loses none of its importance because of its repetition, and gains in importance by the change. These Semi-Annual Sales were originally sales of sample pairs of Hosiery, and this sale is a sale of sample pairs of Hosiery (but a very much more carefully selected lot than we have ever been able to show), and in addition a very important special purchase.

One of the best commission houses in this country decided to give up its Hosiery section. From them we bought 1000 dozen of Hosiery and secured an extremely low price on the condition that we would take the whole lot. Three-quarters of the lot was exactly suited to our trade; one-quarter was not. That quarter we sold to a house in another city, and by this double transaction secured about 9000 pairs of splendid Hosiery at prices that would be great bargains in any market, but are extraordinary under the present market conditions.

Most of the Hosiery offered in this sale is usually sold for twice our prices, and in many cases at more than twice.

8,000,000 MEN LOST IN THE WAR

DENVER, Col., June 19.—More than 8,000,000 soldiers lost in dead, wounded and prisoners comprise the total toll of the first six months of the great war, according to figures furnished by the Red Cross and made public today by Dr. K. Ziegler, German consul here.

According to his report, the total killed in the first six months was 2,165,000, divided, he finds, as follows: Germany, 482,000; Austria, 541,000; France, 464,000; Great Britain, 116,000; Russia, 732,000.

The losses of the Belgians, Servians, Montenegrins, Turks and Japanese are not included in the summary.

Canadians Suffer More Big Losses

OTTAWA, Ont., June 19—General Hughes, minister of militia, is advised that the Canadian first brigade consisting of the first, second, third, and fourth battalions, from Quebec, have been in another heavy engagement with considerable losses. The fighting is thought to have been near Festubert, France.

DETECTIVES LOOK UP CARL CHANDLER

New York detectives are in Boston today, looking up the record of Carl H. Chandler, the former Bostonian, who is mentioned as the missing mysterious Oliver Osborne.

According to dispatches received from New York the detectives have wired back to their employers that Chandler is well known in that part of Boston where Oliver Osborne is supposed to have lived.

Chandler, who is a special agent of the Treasury Department, formerly stationed in Boston, but now in New York, still maintains, so far as he is concerned, that the whole thing is a joke. He reiterates that he does not know any of the people connected with the case, and says he cannot see any reason why he should be summoned as a witness by David and Benjamin Slade, who are being prosecuted for conspiracy on charges growing out of the Rae Tanzer case.

Attorneys for the government also say they can see no reason why the defence has subpoenaed Chandler.

Norwegians Lose Another Steamer

LONDON, June 19.—A dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph from Copenhagen says:

"The Norwegian steamer Svein Jarl, a vessel of 1135 tons, has been torpedoed. The Norwegian newspapers allege that German spies were aboard the Svein Jarl and other steamers which have been torpedoed before they left port.

The reason is that MURADS are not merely a CLEVER cigarette. They depend on no passing fad or fancy. But they do have those

RUSSIAN ARMY IS AT BAY BEFORE LEMBERG

BERLIN, June 19.—Semi-official figures estimate the Russian losses at 700,000 in killed, wounded and prisoners since May 1. In Galicia the Austro-Germans have taken 200,000 prisoners in the past seven weeks.

STEVEN BURNETT,
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

VIENNA, June 19.—The Russian army defending Lemberg, capital of Galicia, is making its last stand upon the Grodek Lake line. At bay before the forces of General Von Mackensen, the Russians are fighting with the desperation of despair along the line of the Wereszyen and Sekto and Lubaczowka Rivers, where they have entrenched. Ponderous German and Austrian howitzers are being rushed to the front for the bombardment of forts defending Lemberg.

An Austro-German force is reported to have captured Tarnograd, Poland, upon the Tanew River. The Russian troops from the east of the San swept by Tarnograd in retreat before the advancing hosts of General Von Mackensen.

GERMANS USE GAS ON 4-MILE FRONT AGAINST RUSSIA

By FRANCIS LAVELLE MURRAY, Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

PETROGRAD, June 19.—Asphyxiating gas attacks are being made by the Germans on the eastern battle-front on a more extensive scale than at any other time since the war began. Near Goumine, the Germans rested vast quantities of poisonous gas over a line four miles long.

The Russian War Office in an official communique today told of the use of gas, but did not state what effect the use of the fumes had upon the battle at Goumine. It is now admitted by the War Office that part of the Russian army east of the San River in Galicia has retreated across the border into Poland near Tarnograd before the assaults of the Austro-Germans under General Von Mackensen, but other sections of the Russian force retired to the Grodek Lake line where they are entrenching to check the drive against Lemberg.

The text of the official communique follows:

"In the region of Muravieve and Shavli and the Dubissa River, the fighting on Thursday produced little result.

"Muravieva is on the Windau River, fifty-five miles southeast of Libau.

"There was an artillery duel Thursday night on the front of the Ikaza and Rawka Rivers, battle of Kosiovitscoupi and Vollachidlovskala.

"Near Goumine the enemy spread a cloud of poisonous gas along a front four miles long.

"To the right of the San River, our troops withdrew, fighting, across the Tanew River and to the line of the Grodek Lakes.

"Between the Pruth and Dniester Rivers, the enemy who crossed the frontier into Bessarabia recently has been thrown back into Austria."

Two More Leave Carranza Cabinet

WASHINGTON, June 19.—Two more members of Carranza's cabinet, Foreign Minister Urets and Finance Minister Cabrera, have resigned, Consul Canada at Vera Cruz today informed the State Department. This makes four of the first cabinet advisers to bear office in two days, the resignations of Interior Minister Zubaran-Capmany and Minister of Justice Vedigo having been announced yesterday.

Further evidence that Carranza may be about to break with his entire government was given by Consul Canada, in his report that Carranza is moving his office and residence to the old fortress of San Juan de Ulua at the entrance to Vera Cruz harbor.

Philadelphia Navy Yard Has Circus

PHILADELPHIA, June 19.—This is the third annual navy day at the Philadelphia Navy Yard and from 9:30 until sundown a three-ring circus of events, both amusing and instructive, was run off. The varied program of sports, drills and exhibitions attracted thousands this afternoon, and each 25 cents, the price of admission, will be turned over to the Navy Relief Society, which provides for destitute families of officers and enlisted men who die or are killed in the service.

Grasshopper Mash to Destroy Insects in State

Grasshoppers have come under the official ban of the State Board of Agriculture. B. T. Fernald of the board has just issued a receipt for a mash which will aid in stamping out the insects.

The receipt is as follows:

Bran, 20 pounds, paris green one pound, cheap molasses, two quarts; oranges or lemons, three fruits; water, three and one-half gallons.

Mix the bran and paris green dry. Add the molasses to the water, stir in the juice of the fruit and chop up the skin and pulp and add to the last. Now mix this all thoroughly with the poisoned bran and scatter it, broadcast and finely, over the places where the grasshoppers are abundant, preferably early in the morning, so that the grasshoppers can feed upon it before it is dried out by the sun. Enough for two to five acres.

Grasshoppers have done considerable damage to grass and asparagus on fifteen acres of land in South Westford, owned by George A. Kimball.

Woman Leaps from Window to Her Death

Miss Elizabeth Barrett committed suicide today by jumping from the window of her room on the third floor front at No. 41 East Springfield street, south End. She made the desperate leap at 6 o'clock, and died at the City Hospital three hours later. Notes found in her room, addressed to relatives and friends, that she intended to kill herself. Melancholy, due to mental trouble, is believed to be the cause. Miss Barrett was forty-five years old.

Miss Barrett, clad in her night dress and unconscious, was found on the sidewalk in front of her lodging house.

Duck Trousers Steal 'Exams' at Annapolis

ANNAPOLIS, Md., June 19.—Even the members of the court of inquiry which is investigating "cheating" charges against Annapolis "middies" had to laugh when Ensign Struble, one of the defendants, cross-examined Midshipman J. K. Davis. The witness was asked if he had the case where a messenger in one of the academic departments, wearing white duck trousers, let the mimeograph machine on which examination papers were printed and later sold the answers to a midshipman. Davis said he had heard the story, but did not regard it seriously.

Harvard Yard May See Auction Sales

Harvard's big yard may present a monster auction mart, should the idea of selling college furniture, advocated by Professor Hugo Munsterberg, be taken up. With the seniors leaving their accoutrements, the freshman now on the campus will have furnishings for next year and the middleman getting the profits—both going and coming—the Crimson says.

"The Student Council should each year appoint a day on which seniors and freshmen should gather in the yard, whereupon mahogany desks and brass bedsteads will start up on another cycle to the mutual benefit of all erstwhile and henceforth owners."

3 Hurt, 2 Fatally, by Blackhand Bomb

BAYONNE, N. J.—A bomb exploded here early today fatally injured Charles Sommers and Edward Weil, seriously hurt Charles Geribotto and demolished the drug store of Alphonse De Meyere. Windows were shattered for blocks around by the explosion. The bomb was placed in the drug store entrance and $5,000 damage was done.

It was the second time supposed blackhanders have destroyed the wealthy druggist's property within a month.

De Mercure today admitted that the Blackhanders had demanded $5,000 from him, but would give no other details.

Floods Follow Kansas Cyclone

KANSAS CITY, June 19.—Serious floods today menace the territory swept by the cyclone storms of the last forty-eight hour in Missouri and Kansas, which caused the death of seventeen persons and inflicted enormous property and crop damage. All points along the Missouri river and throughout the Kansas river valley were threatened. Government weather stations sent warnings to points in the Blue, Republican and Solomon river valleys in Kansas. The huge dikes at Clay Centre were being heavily taxed today. Trains into Kansas City were running from one to three hours late today. Eighteen miles of the Burlington Railroad in Nebraska were washed out and service was suspended.

GERHARD TO SEE KAISER AND PLAN NOTE

By FREDERICK WERNER,
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

BERLIN, June 19.—Dr. Anton Meyer-Gerhard, special diplomatic envoy of Count von Bernstorff, German Ambassador to the United States, was invited to Imperial Headquarters today for his first conference with Emperor William.

Meyer-Gerhard will assist in an advisory capacity in the drafting of a reply to President Wilson's second note, relative to Germany's submarine war. The reply is expected to be ready about July 15. It is learned upon the highest authority that it will be conciliatory in tone.

NOTE TO BRITAIN, MEXICAN TROUBLE, PERPLEX WILSON

By THEODORE TILLER,
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 19.—Interest in the German answer to the American note, and forecasts of its contents, took a secondary place here today, as the international troubles of the administration multiplied.

There was no attempt to minimize the importance of the German situation, but it is now practically settled that this country's controversy with the Kaiser's government will remain inactive for two weeks, and meanwhile other serious questions are arising to divert the official and diplomatic mind.

BERLIN TONE HOPEFUL.

The preparation of a first note to Great Britain regarding its interference with non-contraband American cargoes, and the complaint of the Swedish Minister that English censors are tampering with mail to his country, the apparently belligerent attitude of some of the Mexican leaders regarding the announcement of this government that peace must be restored in that republic and the uprising of the Yaqui Indians in Sonora, have piled trouble on the heads of administration officials.

Reports from Berlin that an initial conference between German officials and Dr. Meyer-Gerhard, the special emissary of the German ambassador here, has been held, and that there are predictions in the German capital that an amicable settlement is to be reached, encouraged official Washington today.

It is appreciated, however, that the actual preparation of the German reply has not been begun and that not even the German Foreign Office itself realizes how long it will take to get into what its language will be. Nevertheless, it is regarded as a hopeful sign that in both Berlin and Washington there seems to prevail a feeling that the situation has improved and a settlement may be reached.

The State Department has closed the Meyer-Gerhard incident. Secretary Lansing having accepted the German ambassador's statement that no "hoax" had been perpetrated on the United States.

Administration officials, therefore, turning from Germany to Great Britain, are understood to have decided to make plain to Sir Edward Grey that positive assurances are desired from England that there will be no further unwarranted interference with American commerce by British war vessels.

DEMANDS TO BRITAIN.

Great Britain is to be asked to accept this country's views of international law touching non-contraband commerce just as Germany has been requested to accept the view of the United States as to the seizure of international law which should govern her submarine campaign.

The United States note to Great Britain, it is understood, will insist upon freedom of the seas for neutral trade, and a modification of the British order in council, a war measure which has been responsible for the interference with American cargoes destined to neutral ports.

It will be contended further, according to authoritative reports, that non-contraband shipments, even if consigned to the port of an enemy country, are not subject to seizure unless a general blockade is being maintained. This government has not construed the British order as general in character.

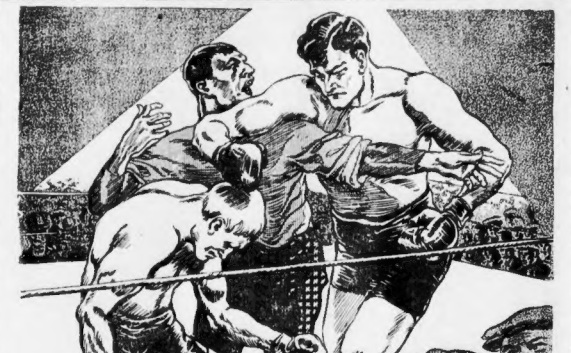
Officials have a new and perplexing problem in the complaint of the Swedish minister that private mail is being opened as it passes through England. It is doubted that this government can do more than transmit the complaint to Great Britain, but the experts of the State Department are said to be examining the laws and precedents on the subject today.

Aiken Presides at Bank Convention

The bankers many accompanied by their wives, attended the sessions at the Hotel Griswold. The State banking associations hold their annual sessions this morning. These were followed by a general meeting with addresses by Charles S. Hamlin, governor of the Federal Reserve Board; W. P. G. Garding of the Federal Reserve Board and others. Alfred L. Aiken, governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, presided at the general session.

Jess Willard's Story of His Life

CHAMPION LOST HIS FIRST RING BATTLE ON A FOUL



I WAS beating Fink all over the ring. All of a sudden he dropped to one knee. The referee jumped between us and just said to me, "You lose!"

(Copyright 1915, by A. Werriff; All Rights Reserved.)

I LOST my first fight on a foul in the tenth round. At least, the referee said so. I didn't know what the foul was, neither did anybody else.

I was beating Fink all over the ring, and all of a sudden he dropped to one knee. The referee jumped in between us, and just said to me, "You lose."

I didn't make any kick. I thought the referee knew his business and maybe I had done something I shouldn't have done. Looking back, I can see that I was robbed. The sporting folks were betting on Fink, and they couldn't afford to have me win.

It must be a funny fight. Fink was a husky six-footer with a pretty fair left hand. He was laughing when he got into the ring, and I heard him tell somebody that he'd give the crowd a run for its money before he bumped me off for the count.

When we squared off I let loose an awful swing at his head. It traveled like a scythe blade, and I thought it would end the fight. But it never landed. He jumped out of the way and jabbed his left hand square into my nose.

He poked me in the nose about eight time more before I had sense enough to get out of the way. That was the way the fight went for about five rounds—me trying to knock Fink's block off with big wide-arm swings, and Fink soaking me in the nose with straight left jabs.

I heard a story the other day that knows just how I felt in that Fink fight.

There was a darky barber at the Kansas City Athletic Club who thought that he was a great fighter. He figured that if he could barber all day and fight every night, he'd soon be a rich man. Well, they matched him with a third-rater that came along, and the little barber was full of brag about what he was going to do.

When they got into the ring the darky had on a nice fighting outfit with an American flag wrapped around his waist.

He did want to put an Irish flag on, but they persuaded him he couldn't get away with it. The old third-rater wore a ragged pair of pants and his shoes had holes in them.

In the first two minutes of the first round the professional hit the barber in the nose about two thousand times. He didn't do a thing but keep his left pumping in and out, landing regularly on the beak. Just before the round was over the darky managed to fall into a clinch.

"Say," he said, holding fast, listen to me, straight. Listen to me! Fo' Gwad's sake scatlah yo' blows!"

That's the way I felt about Fink. I almost begged him to hit me in the eye for a change and left my nose alone. But he made the mistake of keeping at it too long. I got mad at last, and I went at him like a windmill. One of my swings landed, and Mr. Fink went through the ropes and down to the floor.

I didn't have a gumption enough to hit straight, but I did figure out a sort of a chopping punch. I would raise my hands up over my head almost, and bring my fists down like you'd bring an axe.

I nearly caved Fink's pan in, and it was one of those wallops that made him drop to his knees. I reckon the foul was in hitting him on top of his head instead of in the nose.

I got $35 from that fight. Right here and now, I want no boy to be stewed by these stories about the big money fighters make. If a champion isn't a fool or a drunkard he'll pile up a fortune without much trouble. But seconds, raises get small money and third-raters have a hard time making a living.

When I was in New York, I wasn't the only fighter that was starving. Lots of fellows with pretty big names were going around begging grub money. I noticed this about most of them, though. They were drinkers. When they did get a whack at a fat purse they'd blow it in on booze and women.

That fact feels worse than broke. A man can stay a month, but the German he can't make another stomach.

Look, Jack McFarland. There's a boy who never smoked or drank or dissipated. When he made money he saved it. Today he's got a fortune and a family and everybody's proud of him. And if he wanted to come back into the ring it wouldn't take him two weeks to get into condition. He trains every day by living a clean, sober life.

McFarland is a great one. Sullivan always saying: "It isn't fighting that's disgraceful, it's fighters who disgrace fighting. Gulby, a champion in the days of the old London prize ring, went to Parliament. Morrisey, one of our two American champions, was elected to Congress.

The Sapulpa people were pretty sore at the referee for giving Fink that fight, and we were rematched that very night. I did some fast thinking between that time and the next meeting.

I'm only proud of one thing about myself. I never belly-ache. When I fall in anything I don't waste time inventing excuses. I try to figure out how I could have done better. That's how the boys never get anywhere.

After the Fink fight I thought day and night about the way he hit me in the nose. How could he do it? How could I stop him?

First thing, I tried out my own left hand. I stood in the middle of my room and lunged out with it time after time. I didn't pay any attention to my right hand at all. My one idea was to get that long left so I could poke it out fast and hard.

I practiced hours at it, and when I went into the ring again I had a left-hand jab. I fought a man named Ed Burke before I met Fink for the second time. He was a big 200-pounder over at El Reno, and I knocked him out in three rounds. I did it with my left almost entirely.

I only got $75 for that fight, but I got a thousand dollars' worth of confidence. When I faced Fink again I knew I was going to whip him.

I had back and waited for him to lead, and when I saw him shoot out with his left I turned my own left loose. It got to his face first and nearly jolted his teeth out.

I don't believe I used my right at all. I was so excited over discovering my left. In the third round I caught him on the point with the law with my left, and they had quite a time bringing him to. I got $35 for winning that fight.

My left came as a great surprise to Johnson, though. When I met him with it first he shook his head and grinned.

"Where did you get it, boy?" he said. "Where didn't get it?" I said. "You oughta left it at home."

I get a lot of power in my left jabs because I let my body follow them. They tell me that was the way Fitzsimmons fought. He let his shoulders go with the punch. That makes all the difference in the world in hitting.

Corbett was looked on as a light hitter because he was always going away. Even before his blow landed he had started his back hop. I reckon if he had trained himself to follow through with his shoulders he'd had as hard a wallop as any of them.

But I don't know. Corbett was a bank clerk and he got his strength by gymnasium work. His muscles didn't come to him naturally. Fitzsimmons, for instance, was a blacksmith, Jeffries was a boilermaker, and I was a horse breaker. The stuff you get outdoors by doing hard work beats all the sissey you get by pulling weights. A woodpile is twice as good as any machine.

That's not taking credit away from Corbett. It's giving it to him. If he had had the natural strength and tremendous build of a Sullivan or a Jeffries, he would have been the world's greatest champion. Jim Corbett had brains and he was game.

Let nobody make any doubt about Corbett's gameness. He went against Peter Jackson when the big black was a terror. That battle went sixty-one rounds, and the referee called it a draw in the sixty-first round. Both men were so exhausted they could not put up their hands any longer.

Corbett also fought John L. Sullivan when the Boston Strong Boy was supposed to be invincible. Whiskey had made Sullivan a wreck of his former strength, but people didn't know it. Sullivan himself figured that he could dissipate for months and then make it all right by training a few weeks.

He knows better now. So do other people. You can't train whiskey away. Even if he stops drinking, a man is never as good as he was before. But when Corbett stepped into the ring to meet the mighty John L. he thought he was taking a chance on sudden death.

And I say that Corbett's first battle was a great performance. For twenty-three rounds he landed ten blows to the champion's one. I would have certainly liked to have been there, for I'm crazy about cleverness.

To whip a man by being the biggest and strongest doesn't mean much to me. The big thing is to feel you're used brains and skill. If the ring isn't anything but a butting match between two bulls, then the quicker it goes the better.

It makes me mad all over for people to think I haven't got anything but height and weight. Why, I've practiced one-foot movement for weeks at a time. I've stood before a looking glass trying left jabs for hours.

And I think Jack Johnson will tell you that I'm more than just a "box car." Cleverness is the one thing that makes professional boxing a little better than street brawling.

Summerfield's Employes Have Annual Outing

The employes of the Summerfield Furniture Company are today recalling with great pleasure their annual outing at the Summer home of Mr. Summerfield, Nahant, Mass. The party was conveyed to the beach in five big motor trucks.

The program of sports included a tug-of-war between the sales force and the shipping department, and a ball game between the warehouse men and the store clerks. The former won, 9 to 2.

Earl Dale won the fat man's race and Robert Norton conquered the greased pig. Dinner was served at the Summerfield cottage. The committee in charge was George T. Twomey, chairman; Seaton McLennan, field marshal, and James A. Lannigan, official referee.

ATTACCHI DELLE AREONAVI MALBORGHETTO AGLI ESTREMI

ROME, 19 giugno.—Dirigibili ed aeroplani italiani han fatto un attacco nella parte a sud della proiecta austriaca di Gerzia, producendo dei danni considerevoli alle linee ferroviarie ed agli accampamenti militari. Secondo il rapporto ufficiale del Comando Italiano tali attacchi alla squadra aerea italiana saran continuati ogni.

DISTRUGGENDO MALBORGHETTO.

La lotta vicino a Plava, sull'Isonzo, sfa sempre piu' importante. Gli Italiani hanno ancora danneggiata immensamente la grande fortezza austriaca di Malborghetto, da dove i dirigibili non rispondono piu', sebbene la fortezza non sia stata ancora presa.

RIUSCITI ATTACCHI NEL TRENTINO.

L'avanzata italiana sul fronte lungo il Tirolo, Trento e il Cadore, procede sicuramente e in modo sod disfacente.

BOMBARDANO LA COSTA D'ITALIA.

Dal rapporto del Comando navale italiano si rileva:

Giugno 18.—Questa mattina una squadra di torpediniere austriache, in ricognizione, fece fuoco sulle coste del mare Adriatico vicino Pavo e Pesare. Nessuno fu ferito. Poco danno fu fatto alla linea ferroviaria.

Le citta' di Pesaro e Rimini, quantunque completamente indifese, furono bombardate. Il danno, in ogni modo, non fu rilevante. Poche case private furono colpite, e tre cittadini furono leggermente feriti.

QUEL CHE SI DICE DI POLA.

NELLA ZONA DI MONTE NERO.

La bravura e lo spirito di sacrificio che le truppe italiane dimostrano in questa zona, meritano il piu' alto encomio. Esse sono degne dei piu' alti onori e della gratitudine di tutta la nazione italiana.

AEROPLANI E DIRIGIBILI.

La notte del 17 giugno un aeroplano attacco' la stazione aerea di Divacco, a 30 miglia da Trieste, sulla linea ferrata che da questa citta' va a Fiume. La stazione fu distrutta.

La stessa notte un dirigibile fece un'escursione nel territorio nemico, bombardando con apparente efficacia la trincee e le posizioni austriache di monte Santo, a sette miglia da Gradisca. Danni rilevanti subi' la stazione di Volojadraga. La nostra aeronava torno' incolume alla sua base.

TWO KILLED IN BIPLANE PLUNGE

Today doctors at the Quincy City Hospital declared that Aviator Harry M. Jones may recover from the effects of his terrible fall at Squantum, when the bi-plane which he was guiding suddenly dashed to earth, killing his two companions.

Jones is the aviator who has been repeatedly seen flying over Boston recently. Within a few days thousands witnessed him encircle the Custom House tower.

The dead are George H. Hersey, Jr., No. 3 Waumbeck street, Squantum, twenty-one years old, and William D. Ely, Jr., of Providence, nineteen years old. Ely was a student of aviation, and it was his first day as a pupil at the aviation school just opened by Jones. Hersey was a watchman at the Aviation Field. Both had considerable experience in flying.

Major William D. Ely of Providence, father of the dead boy, left Quincy today, taking with him the body of his son for burial in Providence. He is heartbroken over the affair.

The accident happened in full view of a score or more persons, including Ely's mother and sister, who from an electric car some miles away witnessed the big machine's fall to earth. They hurried to the scene and were almost overcome when they learned their son and brother was among the killed.

The cause of the accident may never be ascertained.

FINANCE BOARD IS DEFIED BY THE MAYOR

Mayor Curley is officially at war today with the Finance Commission as a result of the refusal of the commission to furnish him with a transcript of the secret evidence in the series of charges connecting the Mayor and Marks Angell.

His declaration of war is in the form of a special order to all city employes forbidding them, under pain of his great displeasure, from testifying before the Commission without being accompanied by counsel.

In a special message to "the press" the Mayor accuses his accusers of "Police Court shyster methods." He charges the Commission with deliberate misstatements and also defends his policy in regard to the disposal of concessions.

To all of the Mayor's recriminations the Finance Commission calmly announced that the third "Angell" report, already planned and drawn up, will be delayed in publication until after the return of the Mayor from the West, that he may miss none of its force through absence.

ANOTHER "ANGELL REPORT" DUE.

This third in the Angell series of reports, the Commission promises, will be even more sensational than the last two, and will delve into the construction of a street in Neponset, which was built undoubtedly by the commissioners, to better the property of Marks Angell, known as the "stockade."

One member of the Finance Commission, James P. Hagerty, dissents from his colleagues in regard to withholding from the Mayor a transcript of the secret "Angell" testimony. Mr. Magenis today stands squarely against the "star-chamber" sessions, and urges public investigations to lessen chance of false charges against public officials.

In the first of the "Angell" charges Mayor Curley was acquitted by the Finance Commission with granting Marks Angell special privileges in filling his contract to raze the probate building, and with plotting to snare away other bidders on the old building.

The second Angell report, charged that the Park Department was carrying out the Mayor's deals in connection with concessions for refreshments in Franklin Park. In the scramble for concessions, the Commission charged, "straw men," relatives of Marks Angell, were used in an effort to capture concessions for Angell.

"EVERY KNOCK A BOOST"

Marks Angell, who declares that he courts the strictest sort of investigation by the Finance Commission, said today that its every knock was a boost. In a long interview he declares that his building for the probate building broke up a "ridders' ring which would have gone no higher than $200 for the building he bought to raze for $1,350.

He insists that the plot of railroad land he leased as a tenant-at-will he will now be able to keep, and not lease to the city, because of "graft" charges by an enemy of Mayor Curley's. As for the proposed street, which the Finance Commission has investigated, he declares it is worth $1,000 to him not to have the street built.

FORCED TO HAVE KNEES BANDAGED

J. A. Swinehamer of No. 3 Holebrook St., Neponset, Was in Terrible Condition.

In prehistoric days when men and women lived close to nature instinct taught them what medicine was necessary for their ills in the roots, herbs, barks and berries that grew in the forest. Later when the conditions of life became complex and artificial and men became a nation of "cliff dwellers," they lost this natural instinct and in seeking a substitute began using drugs, leading to very harmful results.

Plant Juice has demonstrated its merits in thousands of cases of stomach trouble and proof of its efficiency is attested in the testimonials of prominent local men and women who have been restored to health through this remedy.

Recently the signed testimonial of Mr. J. A. Swinehamer, who resides at No. 3 Holebrook street, Neponset, and who has lived in Boston for 35 years, and is a well known lodge member, stated:

"I have suffered from stomach trouble, indigestion, dyspepsia and rheumatism for 20 years. I had no appetite, poor circulation, nerves and restless at nights, and my sleep did me no good. I also had dizzy spells and pains in my back and shoulders. My limbs used to swell very badly and I had to keep my knees bandaged all the time. I had doctored for a great many years, but could not seem to get any relief. Now I can say for publication that I have only taken one bottle of Plant Juice and all my rheumatism has gone; I have taken the bandages off my knees, I can eat any kind of food now, I sleep fine. In fact, I do not have any more aches or pains at all. I consider Plant Juice a wonderful medicine and I can gladly recommend it to anyone."

The Plant Juice man is at the Liggett Drug Store, corner of Washington and Avon streets, where he meets the local public daily, and introduces and explains the merits of this remedy.—Advertisement.

MISS GERTRUDE WEEKS of No. 9 Everett avenue, Dorchester.

It is now a matter of hours and minutes in the race for the AMERICAN'S twenty-five free tours to the California Expositions.

Among the candidates straining every nerve to finish among the twenty-five winners is Miss Gertrude Weeks of No. 9 Everett avenue, Dorchester. As an example of sheer pluck and enthusiasm, her campaign is on a par with that of any other candidate in the race. She is the candidate of her co-workers in the Filene Company's store.

The last big 10-vote coupon in Series "F," together with the vote standing up to and including Series "D," will appear in tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

Taft Misjudges His Size; Bath Tub Overflows

CAPE MAY, N. J., June 19.—Former President Taft, who came here as the guest of the Pennsylvania Bankers' Association, is one of the many who are laughing today about the result of the bath he took in his apartment in the Hotel Cape May.

He failed to gauge properly his displacement in relation to the size of the bath tub. When he climbed into the tub the water overflowed and trickled down upon the heads of the guests in the dining room.

The bankers were assembled in the dining room at the time, waiting patiently for Mr. Taft to appear. Their attention was attracted to a little round, wet spot in the ceiling, which gradually grew until water trickled down on their heads. The management was appealed to and the hotel plumber, who led the investigation, went straight to Mr. Taft's apartment.

Miss Godfrey Breaks Toe in Barefoot Dance

The bravery of Miss Bertha L. Godfrey of No. 325 Commonwealth avenue, the barefoot dancer and a favorite of Boston society, was warmly applauded at the Ginn estate, Winchester, yesterday afternoon, when, despite a broken toe, she appeared in the opening number of the June fantasia.

During a rehearsal Miss Godfrey broke her toe. She received immediate medical attention and, despite protests, insisted upon appearing in the June song.

The fantasia was greatly marred by the accident, for instead of dancing in bare feet, Miss Godfrey was compelled to sing from the porch of the estate, attired in her street clothes and leaning upon a cane.

Girl Is Cut by Glass in West End Explosion

Sadie Karol, nineteen, was badly cut about the face and arms as the result of a mysterious explosion in the store of her father at No. 28 Lowell street, West End.

A score of persons living above the store fled to the street as the fire followed the explosion. Firemen are conducting an investigation, believing the explosion was caused by gasoline.

Miss Karol was standing in the doorway of the store and was showered with window glass. No one was in the store.

Three Injured in Danvers Car Crash

Three persons were injured and fifty others were shaken up in a rear-end collision of trolley cars on High street, Danvers. The accident is said to have resulted when George R. Crane, motorman of the Danvers Highlands car, leaned over the dasher to take off two signal flags.

RED SOX WIND UP HOME STAY TODAY

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

After today's game with the Browns, which will winnup the Red Sox of the Western clubs, the Red Sox will make a little trip to Washington. They will return, however, next Thursday and play at Fenway Park until July 7, when they start West on their second trip to that territory.

They are in second place today, close on the heels of the Chicago White Sox, who are leading the league. Carrigan's men have won seven straight games, which is a pretty good record. It certainly begins to look, for the first time since the season opened, that they have a fine chance for the American League pennant. They have been winning with a crippled team, too. Scott is still out of the game, with two bad legs, and he will remain at home when the team goes to Washington. Hooper got back for part of yesterday's game and it is possible that he will play regularly from now on.

Today's game may see Shore or Mays in the box for the Red Sox, while, it is expected, Laudermilk will twirl for the Browns. In spite of the fact that the visitors have been batted twice running, they have put up two plucky fights and our boys cannot afford to take liberties with them. Doubtless a large crowd will turn out to see the fun.

Drastic Shake-Up in Columbia Crew

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 19.—A newer and more drastic shake-up of the Columbia varsity crew is expected to take place in a day or two because of Coach Jim Rice's displeasure over the trial work-outs shown by the old squad.

With Sengstaken at bow out, Rice sent his new combination for a trial work-out, but the boys were upset by the crossing of the ferry boats and Rice called the crew back after it had gone about two miles against the rollers.

George Lurich Is Injured in Match

NEW YORK, June 19.—George Lurich, the champion Russian wrestler, was removed to Bellevue Hospital as a result of injuries sustained in his match here with Waldech Zbyszko the giant Pole. The wrestlers tested for ten minutes when Zbyszko secured an unbreakable hold and threw the Russian violently to the mat. The bout was declared a draw. Shortly afterward Lurich, failing to revive, was taken to the hospital.

BRAVES' LOSSES WORRY STALLINGS

ST. LOUIS, June 19.—Chief George Stallings of the Boston Braves, plainly settled over all the misfortune encountered in the West and especially chagrined over opening here with a pair of defeats, stated this morning that he wanted to use Bill James in this afternoon's game and that if the big fellow didn't warm up properly and go in and twirl one of his good games he would be badly put out. James has been taking it very easily and there is nothing to it but that the Braves need some work from him. Pitcher is Stallings' second choice.

Harry Sallee, ex lanky Southpaw, is programmed to go to the hillock for the Cards. He is at his best right now, having shown rare form in his recent outs against the Dodgers and Giants. This means, providing Manager Huggins is not forced to make an eleventh-hour switch, that Lee Meadows, the pitcher who wears glasses, will hurl tomorrow.

The Cards are thundering along in the race, not only having a tight hold on third place, but being right on the Phillies' heels. Hence business at Robison field is very brisk. Some 1400 turned out for Thursday's opener with the Braves, while there were fully 9000 fans in the stands yesterday. Bright and balmy weather today and tomorrow should mean two of the banner throngs of the season.

Johnny Evers and Fred Mitchell are away looking through the bushes in search of talent. "Rube" Cram, the Brown University pitcher, has been bagged by Stallings. Pat Ragan and Dick Rudolph will go home ahead of the club, being booked to depart for Boston tonight.

PHAIR VIEWS ON SPORTS

THE AMATEUR.

Now doth the sturdy college youth
Completely disappear.
His college exploits are forgot,
His name no more we hear.

For he is playing baseball now
In some far-distant town
And wears the name of Flanagan
Or Smith or Jones or Brown.

But when he hastens back to school
When Summer days are o'er
He drops the phoney name and is
An amateur once more.

It is an ancient custom in
Our schools of higher thought,
An amateur is but a pro
Who never has been caught.

The fact that rain is made up largely of water explains, in a way, the average magnate's aversion to water as a beverage.

It is claimed that Branch Rickey's squad now consists of seventeen ball players, but it is hard to believe it after seeing them in action.

It is possible to overcome the dope habit, but Sam Langford's habit of meeting Jim Johnson is incurable.

STONE AGE STUFF.

"The Sox are stealing signals," so a lot of athletes cry.
It causes one to yawn and yawn and heave a heavy sigh.
It grieves one sore to hear that old and hoary alibi.

This Speaker may become plate shy as a result of that bump on the dome, but we know players who wouldn't become plate shy if they were hit with a sledge hammer.

Ball players as well as magnates have adopted a policy of retrenchment. Hal Chase has had his alimony reduced.

Hass Will Join Athletics.

Bruno Hass, captain and pitcher of the Worcester Academy nine this Spring, has given up his idea of entering college and will join Connie Mack's Athletics Monday. Hass hails from Shrewsbury.

Browns Make Quick Jump to Detroit

The Browns make a hurry-up trip to Detroit for a game tomorrow after today's contest with the Red Sox at Fenway Park. Manager Rickey is not in Boston with his club and Third Baseman Austin is handling the reins.

Rickey is touring the Middle West for talent, being plainly disgusted with the way the Browns are floundering along in the race. President Hedges spent one day with the Browns in New York before the club came to Boston and then hit it up over some small Eastern circuits in search for new talent.

Two College Players May Soon Join Giants

Two college players, a catcher and a pitcher, are likely to be added to the Giants' collection of players soon. Report from the West has it that Joe Keanedy, of Notre Dame, one of the best college backstops of the year, has accepted terms with McGraw's team. He is said to be a crack receiver as well as a good hitter. The pitcher who may join forces with the Giants is Johnson of Massachusetts Agricultural, who has some big strike-out feats to his credit.

25 Free Trips
TO THE
World's Series
All Expenses Paid by the American

Tomorrow the race for the twenty-five trips to the World's Series begins.

This means that it is imperative that you GET YOUR NOMINATION IN TODAY.

Of course, you can enter the race at any time, but there is no doubt about it—an early start means a tremendous advantage.

The contest has been divided into 12 weekly periods. The plan of the contest, which is exceedingly simple, will be explained in detail in tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

The principal thing to remember is that there are no subscriptions to solicit, no money to collect; nothing at all to do, in fact, except to gather the vote coupons which will appear in every issue of the Daily and Sunday AMERICAN.

That's absolutely all there's to the contest plan, except one thing: THE DOUBLE VOTE VALUE GIVEN FOR CONSECUTIVE SETS OF COUPONS.

One consecutive set of coupons is 7 consecutively numbered coupons, viz., one each of Series "A" No. 1 coupon, one each of Series "A" No. 2 coupon, one each of Series "A" No. 3 coupon, and so on up to and including Series "A" No. 7 coupon.

The double vote value will NOT be given unless the set is consecutive (as described). If, for example, a set is lacking in any consecutive number, the votes in this set will count only for their face value because the coupon numbers will not be of consecutive dates.

More information about this consecutive saving plan will be found in the full page announcement of tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

The thing to do TODAY, RIGHT NOW, if you have not already done so, is to send in your nomination blank so that you can get a flying start with the first coupon in the first series when it appears tomorrow.

Remember, there are twenty-five trips, and it is not necessary to be first in the final list of winners in order to capture a big award. All of the twenty-five trips will be exactly alike in every respect, and as long as you are among the twenty-five winners it does not matter whether you are first or twenty-fifth in the race—the award will be the same.

IT ALL RESTS WITH YOU WHETHER YOU WILL BE AMONG THE WINNING TWENTY-FIVE OR NOT.

All that is necessary is a little energy and ambition—enthusiasm sufficient to make you line up your friends and have them save the all-important vote coupons for YOU.

Your friends will all help you if you will notify them that you are in the race TO WIN. Send word to all of them TODAY that you want their support, and start off tomorrow (when the first coupon appears in the Sunday AMERICAN) with a rush.

Every fan is on an absolutely equal footing.

WATCH FOR THE FIRST VOTE COUPON IN TOMORROW'S SUNDAY AMERICAN.

Send in This Nomination Blank NOW

BRITTON AFTER 'WELTER' TITLE

By JACK CONWAY.

JACK BRITTON, whom Danny Morgan declares is the greatest welterweight boxer in captivity, is scheduled to do a few training stunts in our midst before the dear old life saving stations along Washington street and on the Hayward Islands close tonight. Britton is not in Boston merely to see that said life saving stations are locked up tight at the proper hour or in order to take a few shots at the colored gentleman at Revere Beach, who allow any orderly citizen with the necessary cash to throw perfectly good nickel baseballs at their headquarters of thought. He is visiting our fair village to prove that he is a better boxer than one Mike Glover of South Boston, whom he is scheduled to meet in a twelve-round skirmish at the Atlas A. A. tonight.

Britton is not a stranger in these parts. He has been here before and he scored with a big bang. Morgan's glove wielder has engaged in three bouts at the Arena. He knocked out Eddie Murphy and Joe Egan, while he won on a foul from "Young" Saylor.

Britton is a great boxer and a sweet puncher. He proved this in his three contests in this city. Jack is unfortunate in weighing more than the lightweight scale of 133-135 pounds. If he could make low weight, he would be the logical opponent for Freddy Welsh. Britton, however, is a big lightweight like Packey McFarland, and has been obliged to come out and admit that he is a welterweight. He now wants to win the welterweight championship.

CHARLEY WHITE made a great showing in his bouts in Boston, but he is not as high class a performer as Britton. The latter is not a stranger to the Chicago lightweight. They met in a bout at New Orleans almost two years ago. The weight for that match was 133 pounds a few hours before the men entered the ring. White believed that the low weight would weaken Britton. Jack, however, was the best when the bell sounded for the opening of the beating, the contest began stopped in the eighteenth session when White was helpless and unable to defend himself. White, of course, has improved since he lost to Britton, but the latter is as good as he was then, but the weight question makes it impossible to forecastle another tussle with Nate-Lewis' rugged puncher.

BRITTON will have to fight at top speed if he is to win from Glover. The South Boston boxer has already engaged in a couple of hard fights with Morgan as sensation. He has defeated him once, while he was beaten in the other encounter. Mike is preparing for the match at Highland Lake. George Freeman, his manager, admits that Britton possesses plenty of class, but he asserts that Glover will go him one better at the Atlas Club next Tuesday evening.

GILBERT GALLANT will probably be signed to meet one of the star men in the lightweight class in a contest to be held at the Atlas Club within a few weeks. Gallant has had considerable hard luck in the bouts which were arranged for him by the local club this year. His contest with Sam Robideau was nulled off without a hitch, but Freddy Welsh was injured after agreeing to meet Gallant here, while Ed Wolgast got a bad attack of cold feet after arriving in Boston for a tussle with Alex McLean's aggressive lightweight.

Fresh Favors for Fans

By H. W. LANIGAN

Come what may, the Red Sox are having a Ned of a time scooting past the White Sox and Tigers, though at that they now have a shade on the latter club. Likewise are the wooly Westerners finding it a tough matter to fatten their leads on our honorable outfit, summed up and a total struck this means that there is a rip-roaring three-cornered race on for the gonfalon in the Johnsonian organization, and woe unto the outfit that cracks. The Yankees running fourth, can scarcely be taken seriously. Washington, figured extensively in a number of quarters in the Spring, are not showing much. But later on the Griff entry may prove quite dangerous. 'Tis curtains, sans the registering of miracles, on the days of Foth, Mack and Rickey, the three tallers.

Master George Foster, a winner again yesterday, always takes special delight in flopping the Browns. That's because he was originally allied with that club when brought into the big arena. One of Bob Hedges' scouts in a former Texas League hero named Charley Barrett. He has been on the St. Louis job some five or six years and has brought in his share of the budding broilers. Foster was one of Barrett's boys. Charley saw the little slabbist at work down in that dear Musketeer State, one day some five years ago, and promptly got sweet on him. The Muskogee Club was on the ropes, and Barrett bought Foster, along with two other youths, for the anything but munificent sum of $300. In St. Louis, Jim figured him too small of build to go it supreme fully in the big show, hence, scarcely gave Foster a sufficient chance to prove his worth. The lad equality one eventually came to Boston and now ranks as rated among Bill Carrigan's livest slabmen. Judged on H. B. Johnson's 1914 figures, Foster was the second best hurler in the A. L. a year ago, and as all good rooters know, is off to the right fost this Summer.

The Athletics played a farcial game against the White Sox yesterday, but the Rowland entry won pulled up to a 4 to 4 fumble and a long chuck by Weaver gave the Mackmen two runs to start with. Thereafter the Hose had matters all its own way. Bush had no control, while Davis, who followed "Bullet Joe," was equally as wild. Then, the Virginia hurler gave the Hose tremendous leads off the bags that they skedaddled around pretty much as they pleased. Tis wired this way that in the closing chapters Lapp did not much as bother to head off the runners.

Clarence Rowland stated when in Boston last week that "Happy" Felch, whom resident "fans" only saw in action in the last matinee, was the best young hit ting outfielder in the game, and that "Eva Tanguay" Cobb, Tris tram Speaker and Joe Jackson were about the only subscribers in the Johnsonian circuit having in the ex-Milwaukeean. "Happy" has played the ball in all four Eastern stands. Yesterday he rapped out a brace of hits, bags aoused in the fourth canto. Later on Felch spiked Catcher McAvoy, and the pouncy receiver will be lost to C. Mack for ten days or two weeks at least.

* * *

To get back to Joe Bush, it may be inserted that his one claim to baseball fame was the winning game he pitched against the Giants in the 1913 world's series. Mack knew he was taking a chance when he sent Bush to the slab. That was because Joe's chief fault all Summer had been his wildness. Right from the start in his big game his control was bogus, and in an early inning, the second, we believe, if memory serves correctly, he passed one New Yorker and winged another. Next the count on Jack Murray was 3-0. McGraw flashed for the unexpected, wig-wagging to Murray to hit the next one. Jack hit it all right and hit it solidly, but Eddie Collins hiked back of first for a rattling good stop, and with Barry's aid saw that one of the timeliest twin killings on record was pulled. That stop and play took the pepper out of the Giants and brought Bush back to terra firma. In the closing rounds he was a bear, and he finally stalked off the hillock a winner. As Bush landed in forty-fourth place in the 1914 pitching records, and with his club a pennant grabber, he unquestionably has Collins to thank for putting him in the hero class. This is likewise a lean year for Bush—his good games are few and far between.

Victor Linart Wins One-Hour Motor Race

Victor Linart was the winner of the postponed one-hour motor-pace race at the Revere track, beating out George Wiley, "Pinky" Turville and Harold Rollins. Linart covered forty-three miles and five laps.

Wiley led up to the twentieth mile and had kicked away three-quarters of a lap on Linhart, when his tire burst. He had been showing a lot of speed when this misfortune happened, and would probably have reached the forty-four mile mark forty-five miles in the alloted time had he not been so unfortunate as to have his tire blow out. Rollins came in the right fost this Summer.

'CHASERS FEATURE BIG RACE CARD

Six high class races are on the card at the Country Club this afternoon and society will turn out in great numbers to witness the best set of horse races ever scheduled in this section of the country.

Four of the events will be steeplechases and the best horses in the East are entered. The Middlesex Hunt cup for registered hunters every a three mile and a half course, the Brookline handicap, the fourteenth annual running of the Country Club Grand Annual and National Hunt cup are on the program.

In the Grand Annual, Cherry Maguire will be a starter, as her owner, Mrs. Payne Whitney, is very anxious to make it two straight for this sturdy mare. Chapadero may not be able to get to the post. Jess Don't Like the "Eat Him Up Stuff"

Jess Willard never had any patience with fight spectators who always want to see the under dog have his head knocked off. He says the cleverer an adversary is the more he admires and likes him.

In one of his first fights—that with Al Mandeno—he was tempted not to deliver the knock-out blow when the crowd urged him to "Eat him up, Jess."

There's a lot of good, sound sense and sportsmanship in what Willard says in the twelfth chapter of his autobiography, which appears in the AMERICAN on Monday.

The mother of two young boys said the other day after reading the first chapters, "I don't hold with prize fights, but if my boys follow Willard's advice they'll turn out to be pretty good average men, I guess."

Speed Kings After Readville Record

The motor races, which were to have taken place at Readville Track Thursday, will be run off today, starting at the beginning. Conditions at the track are ideal, and a track record may be looked for in the 20-mile event. Prize money will be the feature of the meet.

Manager Ed Hurley is busily engaged over for the big race are Carl Graham and Bob Perry, the winner of the great Farmingdale Grand Prize Race a year ago and the former the holder of many dirt track records. There will probably be eight teams in the race after the final field trials.

TRAVERS LANDS OPEN GOLF TITLE

NEW YORK, June 19.—Once again an amateur golfer holds the national golf championship. Jerome D. Travers of the upper Montclair country club head a field of the country's best professional and amateur golfers in the annual title tournament on the links of the Baltusrol golf club. He won with a score of 297.

Travers is the fifth American to win the title and the second amateur player in three years to lead the field.

Tom McNamara, the Boston professional, finished second, two strokes behind the winner. Mike Brady, a Boston golfer, was ninth.

The prize winners follow:

J. D. Travers, New York	297
A. McNamara, Boston	299
C. H. Mackie, Westchester, N. Y.	300
W. Burns, Montclair, N. J.	301
J. Barnes, Pelham	302
J. Hunt, Wheaton, Md.	302
J. Ouimet, The Country Club	303
Jock McLeod, Lakewood, N. J.	303
Walter Hagen, Rochester, N. Y.	303
Tom Kerrigan, Dedham, Mass.	304
Jack Hobens, Baltusrol, N. J.	304
Tom Kerrigan, Dedham, Mass.	304
Emmet French, Ekwanok, Vt.	305

The golf championship of the United States was played over the Baltusrol course, which is considered one of the most difficult in the country. The course is 6,445 yards long and is a par 70 course.

Golf experts predicted that the title would be won by a score of 300 or better, but the course proved to be a severe test of golf and the scores were high.

Travers' victory was a popular one, as he has been a contender for the title for many years. He won the amateur championship in 1907 and 1913, and has been runner-up in the open championship several times.

St. John's Prep. Field Meet to Be Held Today

The St. John's Prep field day and athletic meeting, which was postponed on Bunker Hill Day because of the inclement weather will be held today on the college grounds, Ramsey.

The regular list of events, including baseball games, rowing races and relays will be run off during the day.

An exceptionally strong list of entries have been received for the various events. Twenty-one will start in the one-mile handicap, thirty-two in the quarter, twenty-eight in the two-hundred-yard dash and twenty-two in the half-mile.

The following relay races will be run off: Class A, class B, class C, the high, Roxbury High vs. Hunting ton school, Salem High vs. Boston College High, the Boston College High vs. Worcester Academy, the Belgian relay, Boston College High vs. Worcester Academy, and picked teams from the U. A. A. A. and picked teams from the U. S. A.

BIKE CHAMPS IN GREAT SPEED TEST

TONIGHT'S RACE CARD.

All-American motor-paced race, 100 miles—George Wiley, Worcester, vs. Elmer Collins, Lynn, vs. Clarence Carman, Jamaica, L. I.

Tandem Handicap Race, Amateur Amateur and Professional Races.

The All-American motor-paced race will be ridden tonight over a 50-mile course at the Revere Cycle Track, and George Wiley, Elmer Collins and Clarence Carman, three of America's greatest race followers, will be the starters in this event, a new feature at the track.

A well balanced bill of amateur and professional races, including a tandem handicap, will precede the motor-paced event.

Wiley is pronounced to the big race. In spite of Wiley's recent good showing many are picking Collins to win. It is also the belief that Carman springs the surprise of the New York season. Carman, the Bronx Wonder, is the Belgian relay Victor Linart, the Belgian speed king at Hoopstead Bay Velodrome.

"THE GODDESS"

By GOUVERNEUR MORRIS and CHARLES W. GODDARD

By Gouverneur Morris and Charles W. Goddard

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company.

"TAKE a sheet of paper. Ink your pen. Prepare to write. Write as I dictate: Dear Professor, I. O. U. ten million dollars."

Kehr finished and there was a craning of necks to see what he had written. The I. O. U. was passed from hand to hand.

Suddenly Sturtevant broke the silence.

"This," he said, "is only a scrap of paper. It hasn't cost him a cent—yet."

"True," said Stilliter, "well, then," he turned to Kehr.

"Have you any money with you?"

"Yes."

"Say, yes, sir."

Kehr did this, and then produced from an inner pocket a thick roll of yellow-backs surrounded by a broad rubber band.

"I think it would be pleasant if you distributed them among the gentlemen present."

He began to do so. When, suddenly, Stilliter waked him.

Kehr looked at what remained of his great roll and his jaw dropped. He stammered. Then his brows knitted and the sweat came.

Stilliter handed him the I. O. U.

"There is no hurry about this," he said, sweetly, "still if you could let me have a couple of million on account."

"It's my writing," said Kehr, "but I don't remember writing it."

He was in agony.

"And still you don't believe in hypnotism?"

"That crystal—I."

He turned a pained, astonished face from one to another.

"You may tear up that I. O. U.," said Stilliter grandly. "But we shall keep the actual cash you have distributed as a souvenir of the occasion."

Just then a door opened quietly, and Barclay's private secretary ushered Celestia into the room. The capitalists rose as one man. It was their homage to dignity and beauty. Barclay stepped quickly forward.

"Thank you for coming," he said. "We are busy men, and it is difficult for us to get to hear you. But from what I have gathered it seemed to me that we ought hear you. And now," he smiled with a kind of gentle old-fashioned gallantry, "I am sure of it."

Her eyes lingered a moment with Barclay's and he looked away. Then her lips parted in a serene smile, she looked slowly at each of the others.

"You don't look like evil men," she said. "But I have been told that you grind the poor, and that there is no mercy in you. But that's all rubbish, isn't it?"

Rubbish or not, they all looked a little ashamed of themselves.

"Of course you've made mistakes," she went on sweetly, "but that wasn't malice, was it? It was ignorance. For you can't want the poor to remain poor, and the wretched wretched. I have been sent to show you how this great house, which we call the world, may be clean and fit for human beings to live in.

"You shall ask me questions if you don't understand." And then she spoke for a long time, gently and persuasively, looking slowly from face to face, using simple words that children might have understood.

Celestia enters the room where the capitalists are discussing their mighty new idea

In a far corner of the room Stilliter stood. His eyes never left her, and he looked like a man laboring under a great strain.

The effect of Celestia upon the capitalists was curious. At first they looked cynical and amused, but physically attracted to her. Then they looked interested, and astonished.

Only Kehr retained his expression of shrewd conservatism. Now and then he asked a terse question, and did not seem convinced by her answers. But to the others, after a while, her answers seemed unanswerable.

"And so," she finished, "I don't ask you to give up anything. You shall even have more if you must. I only ask you to help me with the others—to see you that the billions which are wasted shan't be wasted—so that through cleanliness we shall do away with disease, and that through the general well-being, every man, woman and child shall have a right to be happy.

"How about the Constitution?" snapped Kehr.

"Some of you," said Celestia, "will sit in the convention which is to write the new constitution." He gave a hoarse, harsh laugh.

"How about the solid South?"

Celestia shook her head at him as at a pugnacious and pig-headed child.

"We shall have to liquify it," she said. Then, her voice once more grave, and her great eyes sweeping the circle:

"Who is going to help me?" she asked: "we shall need millions—millions in money—millions in brains"—

Barclay stepped swiftly to her side and, with that same smile of gentle, old-fashioned gallantry:

"My dear," he said. "Don't worry about that."

And he turned to the others:

"You have heard a new gospel in the world," he said. "If it's a pipe dream I'm crazy. Gentlemen—what she wishes can be done. And if you are with us, it shall be done."

One by one they came forward, like men in a trance, and shook hands with Celestia. All but Kehr.

"Anything to stand in with old friends," he said, "especially when that's the side your bread's buttered on; but if it's a question of believing that what we've listened to is anything but nonsense, you can count me out."

"We'll run you," said Barclay, "as Senator from Pennsylvania. And you'll do as you're told."

Celestia laughed merrily.

Intimate Recipes—Mock Husband

By DOROTHY DIX

REAL husbands, like real terrapin, once so plentiful in this country that even the poor could afford to indulge in them every day, have now become so scarce that they are a luxury of the rich.

This has made it necessary to find some substitute for the genuine article, for it is a well-known fact that the capricious feminine appetite craves this dainty morsel almost as insatiably as it does chocolate creams, and that women consider no menu properly balanced in which husband is not served up in some fashion or other.

Real husband being so difficult to capture, even by the most expert sportswomen, and so extremely high priced as to be practically out of the reach of everyone except widows who have been left large wads of life insurance, housewives have sought something that would take its place at the family table, and a number of ingenious and toothsome compounds have been devised, whose flavor and appearance are so much like the real thing that they deceive any but Reno connoisseurs.

There are several ways in which this dish may be prepared. The best is, perhaps, Mock Husband a la Suffragette.

To make this, take a chimney that smokes, a cat that stays out at night, and a pocketbook with a Yale lock on it that you cannot pick, and mix them all thoroughly together. Serve piping hot. This dish has all of the peculiar flavor of the real article, and is a great favorite with old maids.

Another form of Mock Husband, commonly known as Mock Husband Ordinaire, or Everyday Mock Husband, is made by taking a good hefty brass knocker, a vinegary temper, a large well-developed grouch and a barrel of surly silence. Blend these thoroughly together and serve with a garnish of grocery bills and dry goods bills and other household expenses. This dish is peculiarly appetizing for breakfast food, and is so satisfying that no woman was ever yet known to desire a second portion of it.

Those who have made Mock Husband after this recipe guarantee that it is as exactly like the real article of which thousands of women have partaken every morning since they were married, that should it be substituted for the simon-pure article they would never know the difference. To give Mock Husband Ordinaire a still more realistic touch a dash of state beer or high balls may be added, but this is optional with the cook and not at all necessary.

Another form of Mock Husband called Mock Husband a la Saphira is a great favorite in many households, and is frequently served to guests by wives whose husbands belong to the rara avis, or fly class. Not being able to obtain any real Husband for their parties or festivities, these poor women are reduced to the necessity of concocting a substitute that they fondly believe deceives even their closest female friends.

The basis of Mock Husband a la Saphira is flea. Take as many of these said be sure they are large, juicy fleas as there are persons to be served. It is best to always select better than flies of different varieties. Having made your flea season the mixture with as much plausibility as you can command, sprinkle it over with an unlimited quantity of references to "Dear John," "My Darling Husband," "our ideal married life," and "My husband's devotion to his home," then throw in a large solid chunk of mendacity about John's being called away on business, and having to work so hard he has little time for his family, and let this mixture cook down to a thick puree.

Be careful not to drop into it any of the salt of the tears of a neglected wife, for this ruins the flavor of the dish and is a mistake that many women make when they first begin to concoct it. Afterward they get more expert. Wreathe the tureen in which Mock Husband a la Saphira is served in false smiles, and your guests will be sure to praise it.

Mock Husband a la Saphira is the piece de resistance in many millionaires' homes, where the girl children acquire such a taste for it that even in later life they prefer it to the real article.

Of course there is a certain sweetness, and tenderness, and delicacy of flavor about Real Husbands that Mock Husbands never acquire, no matter with what skill they are cooked up. Still when it is impossible to obtain the genuine article—and the species which our grandmothers used to serve at the head of their table as the chief ornament of the feast seems well nigh extinct—we must make-shift with what substitutes we can find, and the recipes which have been given will, if faithfully followed, enable any woman to impart a distinct flavor of matrimony to her frugal fare, and give it a pleasing diversity from the usual tea and toast of spinsters.

Also it may be said that while, perhaps, Mock Husband is not quite so tasty as Real Husband it agrees better with a woman, and is much less apt to give her heartburn.

"Mary, Mary, Quite Contrary,---"

By NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1915, by International News Service.

"MARY, Mary, quite contrary, how does your garden grow?"

Mornin' Mary—thought I'd just lean over your hedge a minute to ask my same old question! How does your gardens grow? Months ago I gave you some slips of Dreams. Slips from my own big Dream-tree.

And you promised you'd plant them in your garden and give them a bit of sunshine and rain. You promised, and though you are contrary, you never break your word. Oh, Mary, how're the Dreamslips coming on? Don't go pink and tell your back. Some day you'll dig 'em all up and come to my garden to live when the Dream-slips blossom full.

"Mary, Mary,
Quite contrary,
How does your garden grow?
White Dream-slips,
And red Two-lips,
And Dan at the head of the row?"

Zoe---The Story of a Great Love

By CORALIE STANTON and HEATH HOSKEN.

CRAWLEY felt acutely uncomfortable, but again he found himself totally unable to deal with the immediate question at issue. Also he found himself thinking, not, as Brooke was, of Zoe, but of the pretty Polly Martin, whose mother, the well-known model, had sat to all the late Victorians, and whose grandmother and great-grandmother between them had sat to most of the great European painters of the last half-century.

"I shouldn't do that," said Crawley, rather absent-mindedly. "The less you have to do with Leveredge the better."

"Well then, I think I'll burn the thing," replied Brooke. "One thing I am certain of—I could never see that face again. Not now—now that I know."

"I am not, as you know, a nervous man, though just lately you have not have been inclined to agree with me, but I swear to you, Crawley, I could not do it!"

Crawley tried to say something, but his tongue clove to the roof of his mouth. He was speechless.

"By the way," Brooke went on, "who was she? Don't you know anything about her at all?"

"She . . . who?" stammered Crawley, with ill-affected ignorance.

"Zoe," jerked out Brooke. "Zoe—your Zoe. Don't you know anything about her?"

At that moment, by a curious freak of the imagination, Crawley could only think of Miss Eliza Mary Jane Martin and her crude red hair, her innocently wicked, lovely face, her bad teeth and her terrible Cockney accent. But he answered naturally enough:

CRAWLEY TELLS A DELIBERATE LIE

"No; I know absolutely nothing about her."

"Not even her name?"

He shook his head.

"She was Zoe to me—nothing more."

"But surely you must have known her name?"

"I believe," answered Crawley, "though I really couldn't swear to it, that her name was Mrs. Craddock."

"Mrs. Craddock. Humph! I don't suppose there is a Mr. Craddock; but at the same time there is bound to be some one, in the world who will miss her. A woman can't suddenly disappear like this without someone turning up, even if it's only a landlady with an unpaid bill."

"Yes, yes; I quite appreciate that," murmured Crawley, "though—though I should not think Zoe had left any unpaid bills. You see—oh, but why should we talk of it?"

"Only because, my dear chap, we must be prepared for emergencies, expected or otherwise."

"Let us take your advice," said Crawley boldly, "and wait until we come to the bridge before we cross it."

"Yes, yes sonny, you are right!" agreed Brooke, and a hard note came into his voice. "Pshaw! there are tens of thousands of people like that. Nobody misses 'em—nobody; and even if they do, they don't regret 'em. Lord, it's a funny world, Crawley! However, the thing's done with, and the sooner we forget it the better."

The two men relapsed into silence for a few minutes. The great car was getting close to Crawley's studio.

"I hope it'll be all right," said Brooke.

Crawley did not reply. He was afraid to trust himself.

Five minutes afterward they drew up in front of 49A Grosvenor road.

"Well, here we are, old man!" exclaimed Brooke. "Out you get! I'm anxious to get back to my wife, as you can well imagine."

For a moment or two Noel Crawley wavered. He fought with himself. One part of him wanted to get away from Brooke without a moment's delay, the other wanted to stay and go through with the whole thing. He made one faint and futile effort.

"I'll go on with you to the Savoy," he said with a frantic effort at self-control.

"Nonsense!" replied Brooke. "You just go into your place and see that everything is all right. Ring me up about an hour later. Buck up! Go round and see your Eve. That's the best cure I can suggest. I shall be a new man when I've seen my Di—God bless her!

CHURCH NEWS OF GREATER BOSTON

Boston churches are now preparing for the summer season.

Open air religious services will be held this year on a more extensive scale than ever before.

These services will open Monday on Roxbury street, nearly opposite to the "Z" station, and will continue every evening during the week at 7:30 o'clock.

Evangelist Lawrence Greenwood will have them in charge. The other portions of the city to be covered with this kind of work are Everett, Cambridge, Malden, Newton and Dorchester.

The helpers in these meetings are members of men's classes in the Sunday schools of the Boston churches, members of Y. M. C. A. and of the Christian Endeavor society. The singing will be one of the chief features of the meetings, it is promised by a cornetist.

The open air meetings at the Haverhill railroad station have already begun under the charge of the ticket agent, A. Taplin. Such meetings are held every Sunday afternoon at 2 and close October 31.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks opened narrow and irregular. A number of important issues were advanced from one to three points, others showed small losses or trifling advances. There was no material change in the list. Traders were in an uncertain frame of mind. The New York market is waiting for the result of the great deal of foreign liquidation. The public in this country is not in the buying and in fact there is very large current money holds to the opinion that prices will go much further before there is much of an advance. The decline in the prices of several metals after they had reached high record figures has had some effect in checking the upward trend of prices towards discounting earning possibilities. Fundamentals are very favorable, there is a large supply of money, good crops and some improvement in trade, conditions must have the uplifting influence which could be expected.

News from Germany in regard to President Wilson's second communication regarding the sinking of the Lusitania and the Arabic are still weeks. While it is believed it will be satisfactory to the people here in knowing that it will be definite or that the international difficulty is going to be cleared up soon. Hopes in regard to the foreign situation is without any adequate support and stocks are also holding the business of the United States in check.

There is some improvement in prices in New York during the first fifteen minutes' war order issues benefitting most of the early period gains included American Car & American Locomotive ¾, Baldwin Locomotive 1¾, Distillers Securities ½, Goodrich ½, Mexican Petroleum ¾, Studebaker ½, Westinghouse ¾, New Haven ¼, Northern Pacific ¼ and Union Pacific ¼. Among declines are Amalgamated Copper ¼, American Smelting ¼, American Sugar ¼, N. Y. Central ¼, U. S. Steel ¼, and Rock Island ¼.

Zincs were weak in Boston and most coppers remained here. There were only a few changes in the list of local market. Declines include Alaska Gold ¼, Butte & Superior ¼, Calumet & Arizona ¼, Granby ¼, Isle Royale ¼, Mohawk ¼, Utah Apex ⅛, United Sh. Mach. ½, U. S. Smelting ¼, Utah Apex ⅛.

OUR FIRST DUTY IS TO MAINTAIN PEACE; OUR NEXT DUTY IS TO PREPARE FOR WAR

Bryan Is Not a Menace; Only a Preacher of Folly

THE DANGER to the United States of the agitation upon which Mr. Bryan has entered is evidently to be measured only by the number of people who will listen to him without weighing his utterances.

It is evident enough that there are no lengths of folly to which he is not prepared to go in his fanatical advocacy of a state of ideal and universal peace.

Mr. Bryan's arguments are shallow, even when he condescends to argument. As a rule he contents himself with dogmatic assertion of a theory, holding that his authorship of it gives to it something like divine sanction.

In the second of his series of letters on "The Causeless War," Mr. Bryan falls into the error of saying, "We are protected on either side by thousands of miles of ocean, and this protection is worth more to us than any number of battleships."

We are glad Mr. Bryan has said this, as it affords opportunity to emphasize one fact too often overlooked.

Today the OCEAN IS A HIGHWAY, NOT A BARRIER against hostile approach to any nation. With the swift and certain navigation of the sea by steam, and the multiplication of ships which will carry from a thousand to five thousand men, and batteries in proportion, the country with an extended coast line is vastly more exposed to invasion than one surrounded on every side by foreign peoples.

It would be vastly easier for the Germans to cross the sixty miles of sea separating them from England if it were not for the multitudinous battleships of the British navy than it would be for them to advance another ten miles in Flanders, faced as they are by an entrenched army. Had the land victories of their first success been naval victories in the North Sea they would have been in England by now.

If an attacking force should ever disperse or destroy our navy, the sea would be for it an open highway for the carriage of troops to our shores. It would be a highway vastly more easily and rapidly traversed than any path by land. What utter folly, then, of Bryan to refer to the ocean as "a protection worth more to us than any number of battleships."

Continuing, Mr. Bryan, in his utterly childlike consideration of this problem of vital importance to the nation, asserts that "we have the men with whom to form an army of defence if ever we are attacked; and it is known, too, that we would have the money—more money than we would have had if all the surplus earnings of the people had been invested in armaments."

We hope that those who read this statement will stop to analyze it. We have the men. Yes. But we have not the arms to make them an efficient force. We have not the officers to lead them. Nor have they the rudimentary training necessary to the soldier of today.

If the sea had been swept clear of our battleships by an enemy, or by the results of Mr. Bryan's oratory, and an invader landed on our shores, it would not be long before we would discover the helplessness of our untrained millions. Very quickly, too, we would learn that we had no longer that money over which Mr. Bryan so characteristically gloats. That would go quickly into the war coffers of the unopposed invader.

It is authoritatively reported that thus far the takings of the Germans in Belgium by requisitions, indemnities and other forms of tribute have exceeded $1,500,000,000. Belgium is comparatively a small country. What would be the tax collectible by a foe in possession of our seaboard from Baltimore to Boston, and a hundred miles back into the interior?

It would have paid for the greatest armament by land and sea that the world ever knew, for the battleships at which Mr. Bryan scoffs and for the arming and training of the men WHO, UNARMED AND UNTRAINED, WOULD HAVE BEEN DESPOILED ALIKE OF THEIR FORTUNES AND THEIR LIVES.

Perhaps, after all, Bryan is doing a service by putting out proclamations of this character, if only the people who read them will subject them to the most ordinary examination and analysis.

Trust Company Head Sets a Patriotic Example

The patriotic example set by President Bancroft of the International Trust Company ought to invoke emulation by other employers in this State and country. Mr. Bancroft has offered to double the salary of any employe of the International Trust Company who is in the militia during the time he spends at camp.

Until we have compulsory service in the militia, such as the Swiss Republic imposes, we must depend upon the enlightened patriotism of our people by volunteer service, to begin the work of preparing the country's defence against the conditions which the great world war too plainly warns us still exist among mankind.

Every State in the Union ought to compel its citizens to join the militia, learn the use of the rifle, to ride a horse, to handle artillery, to dig trenches, to catch the esprit de corps which is so essential to steadiness and to acquire the discipline which is so essential to prompt and efficient action.

Switzerland, the purest and freest republic on the earth, has such a system. America ought to adopt it immediately. And the national government ought to offer to the intelligent and promising young men of the country a college education if they spend one year of it in military training to make them reserve officers in time of need. This would contribute a higher general education to the economic, political and social efficiency of the country and give us officers and leaders in our national defence.

Inklings and Thinklings

Are Three Divorces Enough? No? Well, How Many?

Questions Suggested by a Perusal of Advance Sheets of an Interview with Ella Wheeler Wilcox, by Mr. Julian Hawthorne. The Interview Took Place Yesterday, at the Parker House, Boston, Mass., and Will Be Printed in the Sunday AMERICAN. Being But One of Many, Many, MANY Sunday AMERICAN Features.

"'I am a theosophist,' said Ella Wheeler Wilcox in her little sitting-room at the Parker House, when I asked her whether she were a Christian Scientist."

So begins, in the Sunday AMERICAN for tomorrow, Mr. Julian Hawthorne's report of an interview with this remarkable woman, poet and teacher.

Mrs. Wilcox had come to Boston in connection with certain preparations to reproduce some of her poems in the moving picture halls. She had herself been photographed for the films. The reception room of her hotel suite was thronged by Boston friends; but she was nevertheless graciously willing to talk to her AMERICAN readers through the new medium of an interview.

It is safe to say that no American woman of the day is so widely known or so widely read as Ella Wheeler Wilcox. Several times each month she mounts the pulpit of her own particular corner of this newspaper, and other journals in the American-Journal-Examiner organization, to speak to millions of Americans of both sexes and of all ages. They do not need to share Mrs. Wilcox's views of religion—and it may be that, in New England anyhow comparatively few of them do—to accept with pleasure her cheerful messages of love and hope.

Mrs. Wilcox is, perhaps, at her best when she discusses the intimate problems of everyday existence. She has been a keen observer. When she discusses the perplexities of humanity she talks with a knowledge born of constant study with a trained mind. No male, no person with a vote in these United States has a more analytical mind than Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

Mr. Hawthorne, who confesses that he approached the distinguished poet sympathetically, asked her her opinion of the war in Europe.

"It is God's house-cleaning," she replied.

The interviewer sought the lady's opinion on Woman, and Marriage.

Every wholesome woman, Mrs. Wilcox said, "wants to marry and should marry."

In connection with which last statement Mrs. Wilcox said something—something about the necessity or the advisability under certain circumstances of being divorced three or four times—which would be quite positively shocking if it were said by anybody else.

Mrs. Wilcox, who finds time to read astrology, together with all her other activities of mind and body, expresses the opinion that the world is at the dawn of a new era. At the end of every two thousand years, she tells Mr. Hawthorne, there enters a new dispensation. Two thousand years ago there was the dispensation of the Bull (Taurus), and just now we are emerging from the dispensation of the Fish (Pisces) into the dispensation of the Air.

It is all quite wonderful, and entertaining, and new—and Ella Wheeler Wilcoxy, with just a dash of Mr. Hawthorne—and we recommend it to readers of the Sunday AMERICAN, confident that they will read with relish and like every word. "Peace," a new poem by Mrs. Wilcox, will be printed for the first time. It is of an order of merit so high that we expect to see it quoted the wide world over.

The Sunday AMERICAN, as usual, will be as full of features as an egg is of meat.

There will be a page of photographs, taken a day or two ago at "Weld," the Brookline estate of Mr. and Mrs. Larz Anderson, revealing some of the younger beauties of Greater Boston society who took part in the out-of-doors performance of a dance-drama. They danced in their bare feet, and their little tootsie-wootsies are visible in the pictures.

A Sunday AMERICAN story to bring a sigh from a thousand tender breasts, and to cause a thousand damosels to ejaculate, "I wish that I were she!" is that which describes how a celebrated theatrical producer went to a Greater Boston college, within the week, witnessed the Senior theatricals, and, before he came away, induced the "star" actress of the class of 1915 to write her name upon one of his ironclad gold-bond contracts. Proving that the short-story stuff is sometimes based upon fact.

The Sunday AMERICAN will reveal how the managers of the Republican machine in Massachusetts, realizing that they can never defeat Governor Walsh with such a campaign as now seems likely, lately tendered the Republican nomination for Governor to TWO eminent gentlemen who have never before been named in this connection—the understanding being that Mr. McCall and Mr. Cushing might be induced to see the wisdom of stepping aside—and in each case received a negative, polite but FIRM.

Five hundred young gentlemen go out from Harvard College this week to take their places in the world and to climb to fame or fortune, or both. The Sunday AMERICAN offers some "inside stuff" on the class of 1915, and prints some pictures. Mr. Lionel de Jersey Harvard goes back immediately to England, and hopes—actually hopes!—to take his place before long on the firing line. "Somewhere in France." Other members of the graduating class face more peaceful futures, but one—already! is the very proud papa of twins.

The greatest acquatic event of the collegiate year, the Yale-Harvard races on the River Thames at New London, will take place on Friday of the coming week. The best advance story of these races, with, of course, the best pictures, will be found in the sporting pages of the Sunday AMERICAN.

Of all the Sunday newspapers printed in New England, the Sunday AMERICAN has the largest circulation. The reading of a single copy of the Sunday AMERICAN—for example, tomorrow's—will explain why.

There is only one way to be absolutely sure of getting the Sunday AMERICAN—which is non-returnable—and that is to speak today to your regular newsdealer.

Science for Workers

By Edgar Lucien Larkin

Q.—1. "What causes the difference in the refrangibility of light from red to violet?

2. "How is the fact that our solar system is travelling toward the star Vega with a velocity of twelve miles per second proved?

3. "How is the distance between the planets ascertained?"—F. F. CONE, Fremont, Cal.

A—1. Differences in wave lengths of light in between 33,000 to the inch for dull red to 63,000 for faint violet causes the rays to be bent aside from a straight line, red to the greatest distance and violet the least.

2. Velocity of the solar system toward the giant sun Vega was found by that very remarkable and powerful instrument, that transcendent triumph of genius, the modern telespectroscope; and the principle is named after Doppler, its discoverer. Stand by a railway track and listen to the approach, pausing and recession of a rapid train. When coming, the pitch of sound of the bell constantly increases in pitch, and the note as rapidly falls at retreat. More waves of sound enter the ear when a bell is approaching and less per second when receding. Resonators have analyzed these sounds and every fact is known.

But Doppler discovered that the spectroscope could detect variations in refrangibility—that is, bending aside of waves of light with approach of light source one way, and toward the other way on recession. And these variations have often been measured with a precision greater than that of the kilogram weight experiment.

All of the bright stars have had their light thus analyzed and then computed by the world's great mathematicians. This is called "line of sight" measurement—that is, measuring speeds of suns coming and going in the straight line of sight. It is a magnificent and impressive branch of the new modern astronomy, and immense knowledge of the motions and magnitude of the stellar structure has thus been gained recently. It is these discoveries that make many books obsolete.

3. Distances of planets from the sun are measured by trigonometrical formulas.
